

Holding the Metal

EN

Directed by: Booker Hoekman & Henry Watson

Student Theater Association Amsterdam

March 8, 9, 10 | University Theatre Amsterdam | start 20:00
tickets at sta-toneel.nl | student €9,00 - regular €12,50

Disguised as a man, a young woman joins the army to find her brother. Because even in a fantasy world with fantastical beings a woman can't join the army without convincing her fellow soldiers that she's a man. Follow this young woman in learning not to fight as a woman, not as a man, but as herself.

And all the while she discovers that, even though it is filled with an Igor, a vampire and even a troll, the appearances of her fellow soldiers are not even the most curious characteristics of this monstrous regiment.

Booker Hoekman
Director

Henry Watson
Director

Director: Booker Hoekman & Henry Watson

Actors: Ilja van Dijk, John-Henry Till, Julia Quintaneiro Pimenta, Julia Waclawczyk, Ashley Prather, Luca Iannazzo, Lenja Moek, Lidewij Bosga, Zuleya Kimba, Floortje Keijzer, Lillian Hendriks, Latife Dag, Timo van der Meer, Marcell Völler, Isis Sriskanthan

Production: Lotte Rijsssemus

Promotion: Lillian Hendriks & Latife Dag

Trigger warnings:
-This show uses
flashing lights

It's your intrepid Vampiric reporter here Otto de Worde, here to fill you, our avid reader, in on the latest turn of events in the ongoing border conflict between Borogravia and Zlobenia. Tensions rose to an all-time high last week when Borogravian troops burnt down one of Ankh-Morpork's Signals Towers just over the border, crippling communication across the Disc.

Ilja van Dijk

John-Henry Till

Ashley Prather

Negotiations with the Borogravians have typically failed since the small, mountain theocracy live by an increasingly ridiculous set of state-mandated restrictions, outlawed as 'abominations' against their deified ruling Monarch, The Duchess Annagovia.

Lenja Moek

A source for The Times was able to obtain some of these 'Abominations against The Duchess', including but not limited to: Women wearing trousers, the smell of cats and public reporting (can you imagine a Disc without newspapers, dear reader?! How gauche!)

Lidewij Bosga

Zuleya Kimba

As of this morning and in response to the Signals Tower, Zlobenian forces have taken the Kneck Keep, capturing several high ranking officers and trapping the marauding Borogravian army.

Lillian Hendriks

Ankh-Morpork, so far remaining a neutral party, has been forced to get involved. The Times' source has informed us that His Grace Samuel Vimes, Commander of the City Watch will shortly be sent out alongside a Military detachment, headed by Lord Rust. It remains to be seen how this conflict will ultimately be resolved, but I will endeavour to bring you the very latest once I have reached the front lines. For now, Otto de Worde, signing off.

Latife Dag

Luca Iannazzo

Timo van der Meer

STA! is always looking for friends. Friends of STA! are there to support us financially so that we can create wonderful performances. Want to become a friend of STA!

Click here or scan the qr-code.

Marcell Völler

Isis Sriskanthan